

The Open University of Sri Lanka

Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences

Department of Legal Studies

Bachelor of Laws Degree Programme - 2021/2022

Constitutional Law I – LLU 3901

Continuous Assessment Test II

---

Date: 10th November 2022

Duration: 9.30 am – 10.30 am

---

Answer ONE (01) question only

Illegible handwriting will be penalized

1. Assume that you have been invited to deliver a speech at a law student conference on the evolution of constitutional law. Prepare your speech with particular reference to the following classifications of constitutions:

- unitary or federal constitutions
- rigid or flexible constitutions
- autochthonous or granted constitutions

Under each classification, you should provide examples from the recent developments in constitutional law.

(20 Marks)

2. The legislative supremacy of Parliament is subject to a number of restrictions, despite the fact that it has unrestricted power. As a result, the notion of Parliament's legislative supremacy is not unquestionable.

Evaluate the above statement concerning the application of the concept of legislative supremacy in the First and Second Republican Constitutions of Sri Lanka.

(20 Marks)

~~~~~All rights reserved~~~~~